The blind and visually impaired of Acadiana were able to get a feel for art today, literally. Artist Mike and Andree Stansbury, opened up their main gallery at the Acadiana Center for The Arts' and reconfigured it to accommodate the visually impaired. Those individuals were able to touch and feel the art, learning firsthand from artist Andree Stansbury how some of it was made. Adreee Stansbury says, "I am truly inspired by them, I can see the smiles and reactions on their faces, and it makes me feel good."
